

United Airlines has started a policy of not allowing horns/antlers on their flights and being very hunter unfriendly. I suggest that we put an article up on the website to boycott United and issue complaints to them. It is time we start to negatively impact anti-gun/anti-hunting companies. My story:

There is disturbing news for sportsmen looking to travel to hunting destinations with United Airlines. The airline has made a policy change that prohibits passengers from carrying on or checking antlers or animal horns of any kind. Sportsmen should contact the airline and voice their displeasure over this policy.

Pat Lefemine, the developer of the nation's leading bow hunting website, www.bowsite.com, recently recounted a troubling story where a group of hunters were told at the United Airline ticket counter that they would not be allowed to bring their antlers back from Canada. This policy was not then nor is now well publicized. Finding out about it at an airline gate can cause numerous problems for sportsmen looking to go home with their trophies.

The policy can be found by

<http://www.united.com/page/article/0,6867,1035,00.html>

Antlers & animal horns

United Airlines does not accept antlers or animal horns as checked or carry-on baggage on any flights.

Click on the link to issue your complaint.

<http://faq.ua2go.com/display/4/kb/atr/index.aspx?tab=atr&c=12&form=customerrelationsForm&cpc=WnaqDcP5KrMu623S1OA64DwwrR4UyhK6fv2ylkXXS&cid=1&r=0.6890113>

Some facts to point out in your complaint:

- Hunters spend $605 million on hunting dogs, far more than the $513 million skiers spend on ski equipment.
- Each year hunters spend more on food for hunting trips than Americans spend on Domino's Pizza.
- Hunters support more than 600,000 jobs.
- The $2.4 billion in annual federal income-tax money generated by hunters' spending would be enough to cover the annual paychecks of 100,000 U.S. troops.
- Hunters spend $23 billion each year, much of this is on travel. Hunters spend $112.4 million on travel in the state of South Dakota alone!
- Tell them you will boycott them and tell all your hunting and non-hunting friends/family to boycott them too.

United Airlines announced today that they are rescinding their policy on horns and antlers. The outcry from angry hunters made them see the light.